INSPECTION OF MEAT

GREAT CARE TAKEN BY GOVERNMENT TO INSURE CLEAN FOOD PRODUCT

"How exceedingly particular the United States government is that nothing in the shape of diseased or tainted meat shall reach the American public is seen in the precautions they take to supervise every step in the process of raising meat for the markets of the country," said Mr. W. M. Shaw, proprietor of the White Store. Mr. Shaw was for a long time in the famous Smithfield market of London, the largest institution of its kind in the world. He was also one of the many buyers for the world-known Gordon and Ironside firm, at one time the largest cattle shippers in the world, whose establishments in Birkenhead and Liverpool, were as well known in Australia and New Zealand and the United States as in England. At another time Mr. Shaw was connected with the firm of Eastman, which boasted of the possession of 1600 retail markets, with headquarters in Lord street, Liverpool. In their interests he used to go to Buenos Aires, the capital of the Argentine republic, to purchase meat.

"There is little chance of diseased or even tainted meat reaching the public markets," said Mr. Shaw to a representative of the Glendale Evening News. "Federal inspection of all live stock is made on the farms and ranches. When they are forwarded to public stockyards or to establishments where federal meat inspection is maintained, they are inspected alive. This 'ante-mortem' inspection is made at the scales where the animals are weighed. Animals suspected of being afflicted with any disease are marked, held apart and slaughtered separately. Some animals are condemned outright and destroyed.

"All the meat that stores such as this sell is killed in Los Angeles under government inspection. It is raised in Utah, Montana and California, a great part coming from the ranches of the Imperial valley. There are three packing houses in Los Angeles—Cudahy's, the Pacific Coast and Hauser's. These houses breed their own cattle on their own ranches. Most of the cattle killed is from two to three years old. The killing is done under thorough inspection. The cattle, sheep and hogs come in alive and are separated into different pens and then go to the killing floors.

"Ten government inspectors look after the killing. The animals are thoroughly gone over while yet alive and any defective or diseased animals are at once rejected. After the animal has been killed it is carefully inspected for such diseases as may not have been manifest outside. The internal organs are sliced up, probed and examined—brains, liver, lungs, kidneys, etc. The least suspicious symptom means rejection of the carcass. Diseased animals, however, are very rare as the government inspection of the ranches usually catches the disease there.

"After killing, the meat is passed through graduated coolers and gets cooled down. The meat is stamped by the government inspectors and is passed as all right. It then goes to the salesrooms, where the butchers go to make their purchases, what is not sold throughout the day goes back to the coolers. Everything is carefully inspected. I have never seen greater care exercised anywhere and I may add that I have never seen any markets so free from diseased meat as those of Los Angeles and vicinity.

"Again, the government rules for meat delivery are so strict that there is little chance of infection of any kind after the meat has been killed. All meats in Los Angeles and vicinity must be carried through the streets in covered vans and covered with clean, white tarpaulin. Most of the meat is delivered by motor trucks and is no time on the road. In every way I think the people of California are fortunate in their meat system and meat markets."

UNIQUE LUNCHEON

Mrs. James D. Mosher was the guest of honor at an unique luncheon Thursday at the Alexandria hotel in Los Angeles, friends from the different states in which she has resided being present. Miss Laura Murphy, also of Glendale, dressed as a golden poppy, represented California, while New York, Missouri, Kansas and Texas were each represented in a novel way. Mrs. Mosher and Miss Murphy were also guests at an informal dance on board the battleship Maryland on Friday.

One of the streams mentioned in war dispatches is the Bug river. There are indications that the practice of drinking from it is in vogue.

LARGE WASTE IN EGGS

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE SAYS FIFTY MILLIONS LOST ANNUALLY

If you ever see a large refrigerator car, painted white, and bearing on its sides the inscription, "U. S. Department of Agriculture, Poultry and Egg Demonstration Car," backing down the Salt Lake railway siding, you will know that Uncle Sam has sent it here to try to aid egg producers to reduce waste. Part of this loss is caused by needless breakage of eggs in transit from the nest to the retailer. Bad handling on the farm accounts for another percentage of loss. Good eggs are unnecessarily addled spoiled and deteriorated in all stages of progress from the carload lot to the breakfast table.

Special inquiry made by Uncle Sam's experts shows that only 25 per cent of eggs secured from farmers would rank as firsts, 60 per cent as seconds, 5 per cent cracked, 4 per cent rotten or stuck to the shell. Some farmers were found to be in the habit of holding eggs four weeks before turning them in at the village store. This vast quantity of spoiled eggs is an unpleasant monument to the needless American waste of good food in the face of increasing population and lowered food production.

Inquiry by the government experts showed that in the Southwest unusually dry, hot weather caused a spoilage of 30 per cent of the eggs produced—the throwing away of $1000 a week from carelessness. The car with its experts went through all that district with the result that the percentage of loss is now almost nothing.

The car is fitted up inside to be an egg-packing and chilling establishment on wheels. In one end is a huge ice bunker, holding more than three tons of ice. At the other end is a good-sized gasoline engine for running the cold air fans and driving the dynamo which supplies the light. The fans drive cold air to all parts of the car and thus make possible the precooling of eggs for shipment and the testing, packing and handling of eggs at temperatures which prevent or delay spoiling.

Chilling eggs is the very soul of the egg industry. Without that process the big cities would have little or no egg supply. Heat is the enemy of the egg. Let an egg stand for any time in a temperature of 68 degrees and it begins to incubate, if it is a fertile egg; to spoil if it is an infertile egg. The car shows how to chill eggs before starting them on their long haul in the refrigerator car.

In another section of the car are two egg-candling rooms where the eggs are tested by the oldest and most effective of all methods. This test determines not only if the egg is fit for food when tested, but if it will stand the long journey by rail to the different centers of consumption. The egg must start out in the pink of condition or it will not remain good.

The candling process shows whether there is "blood" in the egg, where a series of little blood vessels have been formed by sun heat round the embryo; or the heat may have caused the yolk to go to the top of the egg, which characterizes it as a "light floater." The yolk may mix with the white and cause "white rot." The final stage is "black rot" when no light can be seen through the egg. The white may have a greenish color because the egg is full of bacteria.

In its 7000-mile journey the car has already visited 117 different egg-shipping towns. More than 11,000 farmers, commission men and school children have gone up and down its wooden steps to see for themselves the advantages of the proper handling of the nation's egg supply.

OFFICER EFFECTS RESCUE

As Night Patrolman Hollenbeck was going his rounds Sunday night on Broadway he perceived a small rig with a woman and boy coming toward him at a breakneck pace. The horse had taken fright at something and having a free course before him was galloping furiously east on the street. Every moment added to the danger of the occupants of the buggy. They were paralyzed with terror and as the buggy was swaying from side to side in the most alarming fashion, it was a question of only a few moments when both occupants would be thrown violently to the street and probably killed.

Officer Hollenbeck did not hesitate a moment. He was on his wheel and riding up rapidly to the buggy he seized the reins, at the same time dexterously pitching his wheel out of the way. Clinging to the reins Hollenbeck speedily brought the animal to a standstill. He then ascertained that the occupants of the rig were Miss Stone of the Canyon Crest sanitarium and a boy from the same place. No damage was done to the buggy, but the harness was somewhat broken. The officer mended the harness, quieted the horse and finally sent the young woman and the boy on their way. The runaway occurred about 10 p. m.

SPEAKS TO HAWAII

OFFICIAL WIRELESS INSTALLED IN GUERNSEY'S STORE HAS WIDE RADIUS

Stretching out invisible fingers over the Pacific ocean a little instrument in the Guernsey jewelry store at the corner of Broadway and Isabel communicates a faint yet clear ticking to the practiced ear of the operator. That is Hawaii speaking to Glendale. For the first time in the history of this city has a wireless system strong enough to make itself heard at that distance been installed here.

This installation is only one of a series of similar wireless stations that will be set up and authorized in the cities of California for the purpose of giving the official coast time to every community.

Mr. Guernsey has been appointed official watch inspector of the Pacific Electric Railway company in Glendale and the wireless outfit in his store delivers the correct Pacific time from San Francisco and San Diego. In this way there is an accurate adjustment of time all over the state and trains from all points start not only on the minute, but on the exact minute as it is marked in every point in California.

From Washington, D. C., the government observatory sends the time to San Francisco and San Diego. San Francisco has an excellent wireless station and San Diego has a very powerful station on the heights of Point Loma. The San Diego station is the most important and most powerful on the Pacific coast. It controls all the movements of United States warships across the Pacific to Honolulu and farther and also holds the Canal Zone in communication with Washington, D. C.

Glendale's new station is the most powerful equipment in the city. Behind the Hotel Gray building is erected an aerial 65 feet in height. From this five wire lines 100 feet in length each stretch to another pole on the northwest corner of the Hotel Gray. Thence the circuit continues down to the Guernsey jewelry store, where a powerful instrument of the latest wireless pattern is installed. This is connected with a carefully regulated clock and precisely at 12 noon the time is corrected by wireless from San Francisco. At the same time another advice is received from San Diego. In the evening at 8 o'clock San Diego again gives the correct time.

While this is the use that is being made at present of this installation, it will be of much service in future for other purposes and will make the city independent of accident by flood or fire as far as telegraphic communication is coneerned.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

"The person who claims to be sinless and perfect is overdue in heaven." This was one of the many terse and telling sentences which characterized the able and brilliant sermon delivered by Rev. Frank W. Gorman of Portland, Ore., at the First Congregational church Sunday morning.

Mr. Gorman said in part: "It is not a new gospel that the world needs but a twentieth century application of the old gospel. God has a tomorrow. Man will not accomplish much unless he is optimistic.

"The religion of Christ is both individual and social; that is, it deals with individual regeneration and social reformation. God has fooled many times people who have set a time for the world to end. The Bible nowhere speaks of the end of the world, but the end of the age. Every Christian man should be a link to link man to God. The church is not an ornament, but a means of service. To enthrone Christ and the divine order in the world is the work of the church. We should endeavor to change the present world into a world that should be. The church is a sacrament, not a soup kitchen."

Mr. Gorman sang very effectively "Absent."

Mr. J. Stitt Wilson in the evening addressed a very large audience on "The Religion of Jesus." For over an hour the speaker held the close attention of his hearers.

Mr. Wilson's chief contention is that when the teachings of Jesus are lived literally, the kingdom of God will have arrived. The speaker believes in the church and the great work that the church is doing.

Mr. Wilson speaks at the high school at 8 o'clock tonight.

SCARCITY OF MEAT

RABBITS ARE A BIG FACTOR IN AMERICA'S FUTURE MEAT SUPPLY

By C. P. Gilmore in "Domestic Pets."

With the steady and almost prohibitive increase in the cost of meat, one of two means of escaping is offered us. Either to forego meat altogether or use it rarely as a luxury, or develop some other source of supply. Man is a meat-eating animal; this is indicated by his teeth and his digestive organs. Meat is a condensed form of food and a smaller quantity of it will supply the needs of the body than will the average form of vegetables. Therefore, the probability is that to satisfy his craving for meat food he will take the alternative and turn to some other source of meat supply than that offered in cattle and hogs, and this source will be found in rabbits and chickens, and especially rabbits.

Indications are very strong in this direction already. Never since the insane Belgian hare craze which swept over this country some twenty years ago has there been so great an interest manifested in rabbits as at the present time.

Perhaps no country in the world is so blind to its own opportunities for the bettering of the condition of its people in an economic way as our own United States. Here we have family after family, millions of them, in fact, complaining of hard times and yet buying high priced meat, and nine chances out of ten their back yard is grown high with nutritious weeds which could be turned into delicious rabbit frys with little initial cost and trouble.

This providing a meat supply is a national question in Germany and other foreign countries and rabbits are the answer to it.

France, the model country of the world for its saving of its thrifty people, breeds and consumes more rabbits than any other country in the world. In 1912, for instance, over eighty million rabbits were sold in the municipal markets of this country, to say nothing of the vast amount that was sold otherwise and consumed by the breeders.

The raising of rabbits for their furs is now an important industry in France—the furs are sold under various names, such as ermine, chinchilla, sable and otter, the best skins bringing two and three guineas each.

Last year Herr Mariano Harggelet, a German professor of political economy, made the interesting announcement that in the possibilities of a conflict between Germany and England, there would be no need for England to starve no matter how thoroughly every port might be blockaded. He made this statement in reply to the jingoistic Germans who loudly proclaimed that Germany could bottle up England so tightly that her people would starve.

Where will the beef-eaters get their meat? they asked.

"Rabbits," was Prof. Harggelet's reply. He then pointed out that the English were fond of rabbit meat and inasmuch as these animals would litter every six weeks (they will, but shouldn't) that it would not be at all impossible to secure and maintain a sufficient meat supply for the entire population of England.

Before the war London was using some 500,000 a week, mostly imported from Belgium. Belgium was earning from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 a year from rabbits before the war.

Few people know the real value of this little animal; not only are they the cheapest meat to produce, but their meat has the greatest nutritive value of any meat that you can eat. Government reports of analyses are: Beef, 55 per cent net nutriment; mutton, 65 per cent; pork, 75 per cent; chicken, 50 per cent; while rabbit meat contains 83 per cent of net digestible nutriment.

In comparison with chickens, they do not require the expensive varied variety of grains. They are not troubled with mites or lice, and as to cleaning and dressing, it can be done while you are thinking about picking a chicken. A properly raised rabbit will weigh between 3 and 4 pounds at two months, a chicken will weigh about one pound.

The reason why meat prices are soaring higher and higher is that the production of meat in this country has decreased 33 per cent, while the population has increased 11 per cent in the last five years.

Gustav Bischoff of St. Louis, president of the American Meat Packers' association, states that unless something is done to increase the meat production of this country within the next ten years, porterhouse steak will be selling for more than a dollar per pound.

BUSY GETTING VOTES

FORTY THOUSAND EXTRA VOTES FOR EVERY $25 IN NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS

Second Extra Vote Offer

Here's the second big extra vote offer of the contest. Forty thousand extra votes will be issued on every $25 worth of new subscriptions to the Evening News or Tri-City Progress turned into the Glendale Evening News office between Saturday, July 17, and Saturday, July 31, at 8 o'clock p. m. All daily subscriptions to count on this offer must be for at least three months, and all subscriptions to the Tri-City Progress must be for one year or longer.

The second extra vote offer of 40,000 extra votes for every $25 in new subscriptions has proven of great interest to all the contestants and the second lap of The News great subscription campaign is starting out with great vigor. And well it might, for the extra votes that can be secured at this time will count for a great deal when the final count is made. There are still a number of people in the San Fernando valley who have not been solicited for a subscription to the Evening News or the Tri-City Progress by any of the candidates, and the first person asking for these subscriptions will probably get them.

An $850 Maxwell touring car, fully equipped, is surely a prize that is worth working for, and a prize that someone right here in Glendale, Tropico, Burbank or vicinity will surely win, and that someone might as well be you. The Maxwell touring car was purchased of the Maxwell-King agency at the corner of Colorado and Brand boulevards, and will soon be on display at the showrooms of this garage or in front of the Evening News office.

Next in desirability and in point of value in the list of prizes comes the $400 Schiller piano, a pure-toned instrument, with a highly finished mahogany case, one of the most attractive medium-priced instruments to be found in the large showrooms of the Platt Music company of Los Angeles, from which firm it was purchased.

The trip to the exposition, with expenses prepaid, will also be a most desirable one this autumn when California weather will be at its best. This trip may be yours if you miss both the first and second prizes and win the third.

In addition to the three grand prizes are the district prizes, which include three $75 scholarships to the Isaacs-Woodbury Business college of Los Angeles, the $50 bank deposit at the First National bank of Glendale and other prizes to be announced later.

KEEPING OUT FLIES

It is likely that three-fourths of the patrons of Roberts & Echols' drug store at the corner of Brand boulevard and Broadway, who have noticed the peculiar arrangement of the screen doors there, have no idea what purpose they serve. The low screen doors that only occupy one-third of the height of the doorway are a device of the firm for keeping out flies. At first sight this may appear a peculiar method of excluding the objectionable intruders, but it is highly effective.

Mr. Roberts devised the arrangement, which depends on the combined use of a large electric fan and a pair of low screen doors. Not wishing to shut off the interior view of their attractive store, Roberts & Echols cut down the full-length screen doors to one-third and erected a large electric fan over the entrance. The flies, trying to enter the store, are driven downward by the draught of the fan and as they continue toward the doorway they strike the low doors. On account of the downward air currents set in motion by the fan, the flies are unable to make their way to the opening above the doors and are, consequently, compelled to return to the street.

MRS. REBEKAH J. CLOSE

Mrs. Rebekah J. Close passed away at her home, 615 North Louise street, Sunday morning, at the age of 80 years and 30 days. Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home and interment will be in Forest Lawn cemetery. The Scovern-Letton-Frey company of Tropico are in charge.

TENNIS COURTS BUSY

SUPT. JULIUS LEHMAN SAYS THE TOURNAMENT WILL BE BIG SUCCESS

Under the active direction of Mr. Julius Lehman, playground superintendent, a tennis tournament will take place this week on the Union high school courts. Much interest has been created in this series of encounters by the appeal made concerning it in the Glendale Evening News. A large number of young people have come forward and practice has been vigorously prosecuted on the various courts and on home courts.

The public are invited to be present at the tournament, which will begin Tuesday at 8:30 a. m., and will continue at brief intervals all Tuesday and Wednesday, finishing Thursday. The various matches will be played as scheduled, but players may make other arrangements if both agree. Those not playing as scheduled or agreed upon will forfeit.

Players must choose and provide their own umpires. All matches for the first round must be played off by Thursday night. It is believed that this tournament will be the beginning of a new era in lawn tennis in Glendale. Following are the matches as arranged:

Dr. Lusby and Lehman Crandall, 5 Robertshaw, 8:30 a. m.; Earl Brown and O. Wilson, 10 a. m.; Carlton Padelford and T. Phillips, 2 p. m.; Joe Fishel and Billy Balthis, 3 p. m.; Doc Lusby and Lehman Crandall, 5 p. m.; B. D. Balthis and H. Bidwell, 12 noon.

Wednesday—H. Glazier and Norman Badger, 2 p. m.; J. Goldthwaite and J. Lehman, 5:30 p. m.; James McBride and M. Woodward, 10:30 a. m.; George Hastings and Edward Sadler, 8:30 a. m.; H. Badger and Jack Robertshaw, 9:30 a. m.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Three evenings during the past week the church has been crowded with audiences drawn together to see the moving pictures and hear the accompanying lecture representing the immortal story of Bunyan's "Pilgrims' Progress." The last of these representations was given on Sunday evening.

At the morning service the minister, Rev. W. E. Edmonds, preached upon the topic, "The Church of Thyatira," the text being the promise given to him that overcometh: "And I will give him the morning star."

Thyatira was one of the seven churches to which came the message of St. John's revelations; a little church in an out-of-the-way place, but not the less important on that account, for the Lord knew of it, its weakness and its strength.

Lydia, the first European convert, belonged to that church. To the people of that church came the assurance that their works were known and that which was good in them the Lord commended.

Are we careful to commend the good that can be found in others? Is there a great deal of bigotry practiced in the name of religion? Too much narrowness in assuming that those who differ from us are entirely wrong? Let us magnify the good rather than the evil. It was the sevior passing through the streets of Jerusalem, in the beautiful but perhaps apocryphal story, who said of the dead dog lying in the gutter, "Its teeth are white as pearls."

The minister spoke of the ministry of service, the cup of cold water given to the thirsty, and of the human weakness for ornamentation and show, alluding to the costly tributes of flowers in lavish quantities at funerals and the doing of things in themselves good, but robbed of their virtue because done "to be seen of men." And yet the word "intolerance" is much misunderstood; there are evils toward which we are far too tolerant.

The message to the church of Thyatira closed with the promise of power to him that overcometh, but more than that, it promised "I will give him the morning star." This is the promise that Jesus himself will come and dwell with him, for he is "the one altogether lovely, the bright and morning star."

LITTLE ELIZABETH SHIRK

Little Elizabeth Ione Shirk, daughter of Enos and Harriett Dow Shirk of Buena Park, Orange county, and granddaughter of Mrs. Harriett Dow of Orange street, Glendale, passed away Monday morning at the home of her parents, at the age of two years. The remains were brought to Glendale by the Scovern-Letton-Frey Undertaking company this morning. Arrangements for the funeral are not complete at this writing, but services will likely be held Tuesday afternoon.

TILLMAN AND THE WAR

Senator Ben Tillman of South Carolina may know something about tobacco farming, but what he knows of war does not amount to much. Nevertheless, the worthy senator is not backward in voicing his opinion regarding the mighty conflict in Europe. With what looks like flippancy, but is really only the ebullience of an untrained nature, he blurts out as he steps from a train at Portland, Oregon: "The Germans must be whipped." Considering that the Germans have been fighting hard for the better part of a year and have not been whipped yet, the senator is a little too summary in his declaration. Does he think it can be done with a pitchfork or a scythe straightened and bound to a pole?

Whoever was the interviewer who caught the senator at Portland, Ore., he seems to have managed to get the senator to speak on a wonderful variety of subjects; sailing complacently over depths that he could not comprehend. He vouchsafes the information that he is well pleased with the Panama canal, even though the Japanese and the British "know" it. He is candid enough to add that really though he is not exactly pleased with the canal and sees trouble ahead for several years through landslides. Governor Goethals will certainly consult the senator as to when it will be "safe" to open the great waterway to the fleet when he reads his profound criticism.

From the canal the senator skipped to the Pacific coast and dismissed the question of Japanese invasion in a few words. The Pacific coast may now sleep o' nights. Is not Brother Ben on the watch and till he gives the word there need be no dread of invasion?

More than anything else the profound wisdom of the senator is to be seen in his assurance that while the United States navy is not as strong as that of England, yet we could hold our own with Germany, especially if she attacked us. After that Secretary Daniels may dismiss his recently created board of experts; tell Mr. Edison that his services are no longer needed; advise Hiram Maxim that he is mistaken in his estimate of American unpreparedness, and go off himself on a long vacation, leaving the brave southern senator to hold the field.

PLANS FOR NEW NAVY

One of the best departures from the old method of naval development that has ever been devised is that by which Secretary Daniels has called in Thomas Edison and other scientific experts to aid the navy department in inventing new methods of defense. This is likely to result in giving us a navy that will be second to none in power and a coast defense that will effectually prevent any possibility of foreign invasion.

That is what this country needs. It must be strong enough to keep out foreign troops and also strong enough to reach out and defend its interests elsewhere. Once in that position it would have few international troubles. Who can doubt that had the United States not been notoriously weak both on land sea that its voice would have had preponderant force in the counsels of the nations. As it is, European powers have systematically ignored the remonstrances of the United States and are even now parleying when they should be obeying.

It is hoped to change all that under the new system which will probably give this country advanced methods both of offense and defense. Naturally the public cannot expect to be made conversant with all the plans for the future of the army and navy. Much must remain secret, but with men like Edison in touch with the navy board and devoting his profound inventive genius to finding new and effective means for counteracting modern submarine warfare and modern high-power artillery, the problems may be regarded as solved.

It looks as though the wireless control of torpedoes would be one method of defense that with further development would render the coast absolutely impregnable. Imagine a concealed shore station, a submerged torpedo and wireless direction. What invading battleship would have a chance of escape?

That is only one direction in which the newly enlisted energies of the great scientific members of the naval advisory board will be employed. Other and more novel devices are to be experimented with and with so many great minds working on the problem it may be looked on as solved. In the great calm that will succeed the thorough preparation of the country for defense, the advocates of "peace at any price" will have opportunity to talk as much as they please.

GEORGIA'S DEEP DISGRACE

Leon M. Frank, the man who received a commutation of the death sentence passed on him by a coerced Georgia court, was stabbed in jail, Saturday night. This criminal act is strongly suspected to have been instigated by the murderous band who wished to lynch Frank. It is possible that Frank may recover; it is possible he may die. Whatever may be the outcome of this shameful attack on a man whom the highest power in the state had remanded to the protection of the prison authorities, deep disgrace has descended on the state of Georgia.

It is to be hoped that this cruel and lawless deed may result in some improvement of the prison system of that state, which permits convicted murderers to be employed in the brutalizing employment of killing hogs and also makes it possible for a prisoner of this description to have in his possession a butcher knife and to wander unwatched through the corridors at night.

There is something so crude about all this that the accusation of official connivance at this vile deed is not to be wondered at. The anti-reprieve party has all along boasted that it would "get" Frank and it seems to have succeeded in its lawless attempt.

WHAT NEWS? WHAT ADVERTISING?

Intelligent people should be able to distinguish the difference between news matter and advertising matter, but in many instances they are not able to make the distinction.

The editor of the South Pasadena Record, in discussing the subject, says:

"Every item which is of direct interest to the general public and which has no money value to any person is news. Every item which, even though it has some news value, has a money value to any person, firm or organization, is an advertisement.

"If you have friends visiting you, if you are going away, if your neighbor is repairing his house or making a business change, if your church or club is going to give an entertainment, if you have had a party or have attended some affair, this is strictly news matter, because it has no money value to anyone.

"But if your club wishes to announce that there will be an entertainment and that there will be an admission fee of ten cents, or that you have a hot plate you would like to sell or that your neighbor would like to buy a second-hand automobile, that your little son is taking subscriptions for some book or magazine, or any other announcement of a nature similar to these, then set it down as a fact that it is an advertisement, because it has a money value to someone, and that no newspaper will accept it for publication without pay. It is unfair to ask any newspaper to do otherwise. It is just what you yourself would do if you were in the newspaper business, or else you would not be in the business long."

In commenting upon this subject, the Alhambra Daily Advocate says:

"No patron of a paper should ask that any notice of an entertainment be published free of charge where there is an admission price named in the notice. The paper's advertising space is the same as the merchant's goods on the shelf. No one would think of going into a store and asking a merchant to give them a dress or a skirt or a suit of clothes, yet these are the things the merchant has to sell the same as the newspaper's advertising space. Country newspapers are imposed upon in this respect to a remarkable degree, especially among the various organizations that give public entertainments, notably by the home people, for the reason that the publishers, ever loyal to home enterprise, liberal to a fault and large-hearted, give away annually through such channels hundreds of dollars' worth of free space rather than have the charge lodged against them that they are tight-fisted and not disposed to help along home enterprise. It would be much better for the country press if it set its policy firm in this respect and required every proposition having a charge or admission fee to pay for all such notices published in its columns. It is not only business, but it is right."

The editor of the Evening News in conclusion adds to what has been said that the whole fault lies with the country publishers. They have allowed the people of their community to expect free publicity, and now it is difficult to enforce the rule. The evening News stands for the enforcement of the rule, "We charge when you charge." That means we charge when an admission fee is charged, or when it is advertised a collection will be taken up. Men and women possessing a business education approve of the plan of paying for publicity of entertainments to which an admission fee is charged. They are aware that it is the only business-like way to do.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The social committee of the Baptist Young People's Union extend a hearty invitation to the members of the society to attend a social at the home of the McPhersons, 1516 Pioneer drive, Friday evening, July 23, at 8 o'clock. Come prepared to have a good time and you will certainly have one.

F. E. WATLING, Chairman.

NEED MORE WORKERS

A visit to the Pacific avenue playgrounds demonstrates the fact that a few earnest workers, armed with good tools, shovels, hoes, etc., can accomplish wonders; can convert a weed patch into most sightly grounds where the boys and the girls can spend many happy hours these long summer days, for it is not the good fortune of all of the boys and girls of Glendale to spend their vacation at the beach or at some delightful camp in the mountains.

Mrs. Ella W. Richardson has been untiring in her efforts to have the playgrounds fully equipped for the pleasure of the children. May Bros. have been assisting with the grandstand and have donated some very good plans, which having been accepted, are now being used in the erection of the stand, which will be 66 feet long and 24 feet wide, with a seating capacity of 300. A splendid cement foundation is being laid and Tuesday the contractors, May Bros., desire every able-bodied man who can drive a nail and use a hammer to be present and work on the grandstand.

The men who have been assisting Mr. J. C. May and brothers are B. F. Leslie, C. J. Cheney and Charles Force. The cement workers are also busy under the supervision of O. W. Tarr and Jesse Stine and are making a very fine tennis court, 46 feet by 68 feet. Other men who are assisting Tarr and Stine are Robert Bell, S. Woodyard, A. J. Bell Clyde St. Clair, E. E. Bond, E. Aramdula, W. A. Braden, Richard Stine, T. W. Bishop and Earl Rowe.

Fred Volkhart is placing the teeters and swings in position and demonstrates that he is a most capable workman, as well as efficient motorman. More workers are needed, as it is the desire of Mrs. Richardson to have all in readiness for the grand opening Saturday, July 24.

"FUNDAMENTALS"

Hon. William Jennings Bryan will give his famous address, "Fundamentals," under the auspices of the Federation of State Societies at Trinity auditorium, corner of Ninth street and Grand avenue, Los Angeles, on Thursday evening, July 22, beginning at 8 o'clock sharp.

The federation has been very fortunate in securing this address from Mr. Bryan, as it will be the only one given in Los Angeles under the auspices of any organization. This is one of the addresses which has made Mr. Bryan the most popular speaker in America. As it will be impossible for him to speak in the surrounding towns owing to the short time he can be in Southern California, it is expected that many will go to Los Angeles to hear him. While the federation is very fortunate to secure Mr. Bryan for this address, the great "Commoner" is equally fortunate in having an opportunity to speak under the auspices of this organization, which includes ninety state societies of Southern California and represents over 500,000 people. The organization is absolutely nonpartisan and non-political, making it the ideal organization for Mr. Bryan's great peace purposes.

The Rev. E. H. Willisford and D. A. Lane of 1432 Ivy street have arranged to leave today for Manhattan Beach, along with a small band of boys belonging to Mr. Lane's class. The boys will spend the night at the beach sleeping on the sand. They will spend their time in games and fishing and bathing, returning tomorrow night. During a great part of that time Dr. Tracy has been president of the Congregational college at Van. He and Mrs. Tracy are here on furlough and would be back at his post were it not that it is impossible to get into the country just now on account of the war.

BURBANK

C. E. Davison, the hardware man, has taken out the partition which ran across the rear of his storeroom in order to give space for his increasing stock of ranch supplies.

Mrs. L. F. Rhodes of Tejunga avenue returned recently from a visit to her parents and friends at her old home, Niles, Mich.

A. E. Edwards, one of our real estate and exchange men, leaves this week for San Franciscito canyon to work on some mining claims he has there. He informs us that one of them, especially, is most promising, the assay showing a high grade of ore. Mr. Edwards desires us to tell our readers that he has a good mattress picking machine which he will dispose of at a bargain. It may be seen at his office on the San Fernando road.

W. D. Rogers and family, who came here recently from New Hampshire, are now most pleasantly located in a modern bungalow on Verdugo avenue and Mr. Rogers is busy installing his fixtures and goods in the new brick store building on Fourth street, where he will conduct an up-to-date grocery. We welcome this most estimable family to our midst and know that our citizens will extend to them the right hand of fellowship, both in a social and business way. Besides Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, the family consists of a son, Mr. Ralph H. Rogers, who is employed in Los Angeles, and two daughters, the Misses Hazel G. and Esther M., who have just arrived here, their coming being delayed in order that they might complete their term at high school and graduate, Miss Esther being the valedictorian of the class. The young ladies intend to continue their educational work in our state normal.

Mrs. J. M. Lovering enjoys the distinction of being the first to have her name enrolled on the Tri-City Progress subscription list under the new management, and the editor-in-charge feels much complimented thereby. Mrs. Lovering is one of the pioneer residents of Burbank and enjoys keeping in touch with the whole valley, though she is not able to visit it personally as in earlier days. Mr. Lovering was proprietor of the pharmacy before his death and the building is still owned by the family.

P. A. Farley was awarded the contract for the carpenter work on the new Walker block, and H. E. Betts of Glendale received the contract for the brick work. The stakes were set and excavation work commenced last Saturday.

O. C. Lane of the Ford garage returned Saturday from a trip to his ranch near the Taheme pass.

Mrs. Genevieve Thompson, who has charge of the Walker dry goods establishment, had quite an experience last Saturday in which a couple of Mexicans took a prominent part. The Mexicans came into the store, walked around and inspected the goods, but made no purchases and left. After a short time they returned and again made a tour of inspection, Mrs. Thompson being busy with another customer. Their actions aroused her suspicions and as they bought nothing, when they left she notified City Marshal Greenwood, who soon had them in charge. He searched them and found a full cardsharper's gambling outfit, but only fifteen cents in money, which was proof that they didn't expect to buy, but to shoplift. Mr. Greenwood let them go with instructions to hit only the high spots as they left. From various sources it seemed that they had visited several places all the way up from the Mexican line, and while no charges could be made against them, yet without doubt Mrs. Thompson's prompt action prevented at least several petty robberies.

A large number of Glendale people were in the city Saturday and Sunday evenings in attendance on the Blunt-Saunders Seventh Day Adventists' meetings.

TROPICO

Mrs. Wayland Brown of Gardena avenue was one of the many guests who attended the delightful entertainment tendered Miss Virginia Marvin at the Fermosa hotel in Hollywood Friday afternoon. Miss Marvin, who has just entered her teens, is a most wonderful child prodigy, not only in her beautiful and graceful dances, but in the several languages which she speaks very fluently.

This charming young girl, who resides in Berkeley, was a former pupil of Mrs. Brown; in fact, Mrs. Brown gave her her first lessons in dancing. Miss Marvin was sent from Berkeley to Long Beach to represent her city in the pageant that was given in the beach city recently.

Mrs. Brown was also included in the interesting program on Friday afternoon and delighted the guests with two charming impersonations given in her own inimitable manner. Miss Marvin will be the house guest of Mrs. Brown this week and Thursday afternoon Mrs. Brown has arranged a most charming program complimentary to her young guest, which will be given in Butler's hall in Glendale. The guests who are asked to meet Miss Marvin are those who assisted at the queen's coronation at the Fruit and Flower festival held last May in Glendale.

At Thursday's social function Mrs. Brown will be assisted by Mrs. Claire T. Van Etten, Mrs. Arthur Paine and Mrs. John Barrows.

Mrs. A. H. Sellers of Pasadena was a guest Friday afternoon at the home of her sister, Mrs. William Harvey, Jr., of Tropico avenue.

Miss Anna Anderson and sister, Miss Elsie Anderson of Virginia place, are contemplating a most delightful vacation visit to San Diego.

Miss Bess B. Blaney of Philadelphia, Pa., is the house guest of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Pollock of West Park avenue.

Miss Eula Richardson of Central avenue left for Pacific Grove last Saturday morning for a few weeks' visit. The trip also includes a reunion of a number of Miss Richardson's classmates at Stanford university. Five years ago, following the commencement of the university and at the final gathering of the members of the various classes, twenty girls, of whom one was Miss Richardson, decided to hold a reunion at Pacific Grove just five years hence. Upon that occasion to live once again for a few happy days the many joyous days enjoyed at the college. The girls are journeying from all parts of the United States to attend. Miss Margaret Flickinger and sister, Miss Helen Flickinger of Council Bluffs, Iowa, who have been visiting Miss Richardson, accompanied their hostess to Pacific Grove for the reunion. Several of the twenty girls will not be present, for these few have become brides since that meeting five years ago and now have home ties that prevent them attending.

NORTH GLENDALE

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Hunt of 1201 Viola avenue, with their daughters, Misses Loie and Mary, enjoyed a trip by automobile to Gardena Sunday, where they were guests for the day of their uncle and family, Mr. George Cudebec.

Mr. Walter J. Scott and mother, Mrs. Scott of Pasadena, motored to North Glendale Sunday, calling upon Mr. A. R. Dimick and family of 1000 North Central avenue.

Friends of Mrs. I. C. Rice of 1632 Ruth street will be glad to hear that she is recovering from the serious illness that has confined her to the bed for the past week.

Miss Marie Hodsdon, superintendent of the Clara Barton hospital, Los Angeles, was the house guest for the week-end of Mrs. E. C. Swart of 1333 Valley View road.

Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Eckles and little son, Gilbert, of 920 North Central avenue, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Howard P. Alston of Maple avenue Sunday.

Mrs. Charles Ereshman of Lorraine street entertained as her house guest during the past week Mrs. T. W. Sampson of Los Angeles, formerly a resident of North Glendale.

Mrs. G. W. Gregory of 1610 Stocker street entertained as her guests at a beautifully appointed luncheon party last Friday Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Benshoff of East Forty-second street, Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. Morris Leffler and Mrs. J. Weimer, also of Los Angeles.

Miss Bessie Eyton of Los Angeles, well known in moving pictures, was the guest of her mother, Mrs. H. A. Brightly of 1008 North Central avenue Sunday.

Mrs. E. C. Swart of 1333 Valley View road entertained as her guests Sunday Mrs. E. A. Hodsdon, Mr. and Mrs. A. Wilcox of Riverside, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. McLaughlin of 1604 West Thirty-ninth street, Los Angeles, and Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Swart, also of Los Angeles, who enjoyed a motor trip to North Glendale and who were delighted with the beautiful scenic view of our favored locality.

THE FOOTHILL CLUB

One of the most delightful meetings of the Foothill club was held Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. S. Porter on North Brand boulevard, the spacious grounds and gardens being an ideal place for a social gathering on a warm afternoon.

There was a very good attendance of the members present. After all had been received within doors, adjournment was made to the gardens, where a program was given in the shade of the grand old oaks. Miss Grace Crampton read very beautifully and to the delight of all, a selection from "Rebekah of Sunnybrook Farm." Mrs. Wm. H. Aiken, mother of the hostess and her house guest at the present time, recited two beautiful poems, one of them "The Hills of California." The guests were very much impressed with her splendid delivery and her wonderful dramatic power. Mrs. Porter also read from "The Woman's Exchange," a very clever book, which was most highly appreciated.

Following the program the guests walked through the flower gardens to the woods beyond, where they found long tables spread, decorated with huge bouquets of gorgeous hydrangeas, which harmonized well with the lanterns suspended from the overhanging boughs of the trees.

The afternoon out of doors gave a zest to the appetite which the dainty viands satisfied. All the ladies agreed that they had had a most lovely afternoon.

Hello, Bill! Glad to see that you are having a good time.

NEW BONDS FOR HIGHWAYS

When in 1908 Los Angeles county voted $3,500,000 bonds to build a system of 307 miles of county highways, it took the leadership in the good roads movement in California, which has since been followed by nearly every other county of Southern California and which set an example of progressiveness which probably more than any other factor resulted in the success of the $18,000,000 state highway bond campaign. After the bond moneys were exhausted, the improved county highways were so well recognized as an asset that since then about a hundred road districts have been formed to extend the system into localities which were not already served, the cost of these roads built upon the district plan being assessed against the immediately benefited property.

Now a campaign is about to be started for another bond issue, probably in the sum of $2,750,000, for the construction of additional county highways and canyon roads, the building of which cannot possibly be accomplished under the district improvement plan of direct assessments. The cost of the completion of the harbor tract boulevard is also to be included in the estimate of the needed bonds.

This proposed bond issue should be, and undoubtedly will be, met with general favor in every part of the county. The roads already built traverse in pretty thorough manner the more populous portions of the county, but a complete highway system should not stop there—it should tap new and undeveloped parts of the county and should give access to a great wealth of scenic mountain territory. A considerable portion of the county's population has already made the long journey to San Bernardino county to enjoy the great beauties of one particular mountain road. Such mountain roads near at home, where as magnificent scenery is to be found as anywhere in the world, would not only be a source of pleasure to a large proportion of the residents of the county, but would be a great asset both in development of rich territories and in further enhancing this section in attractiveness to tourists.

The new roads which it is proposed to build under the contemplated bond issue are as follows:

San Gabriel canyon, from a point near Azusa to the Antelope valley, near Big Rock creek, thence west to Palmdale, a distance of approximately sixty-three miles, at an estimated cost of $950,000.

Arroyo Seco canyon, from Pasadena to Palmdale, forty-four miles, $850,000.

Mint canyon, from Saugus to the Antelope valley, connecting the road now under construction from Palmdale to Lancaster, thirty miles, $200,000.

Harbor tract boulevard, from Los Angeles thorugh Compton to the harbor, fifteen miles, $400,000.

Pico boulevard, from Los Angeles to the sea, four miles, $45,000.

Coast road from Venice to Manhattan and Redondo Beach, two miles, $30,000.

Road from the Valley boulevard near Pomona, through La Brea canyon, and connecting with the Orange county highway system, six miles, $65,000.

The board of supervisors will make the question of this proposed bond issue a special order of business for Wednesday, July 28, when delegates will be invited to attend representing all the Chambers of Commerce of the county, the Automobile club and other leading civic, commercial and improvement bodies.

CENSORSHIP IN ENGLAND

Much feeling has been excited in England and her colonies over Lord Kitchener's board of censorship, which revises all war news before it is given to the public, and opens soldiers' letters before their own relatives can see them. This policy has been stigmatised as too harsh and also as useless. As a matter of fact, however, it has been of the greatest service to Great Britain.

Great Britain and her colonies are full of German spies, who have been trained for years under German government instruction to recognize at once every item of information that may be serviceable to the Fatherland and to communicate it at once to the intelligence service of the government. Recently a British soldier sent a letter home giving an interesting account of his life in a certain town in France. He told how his regiment was enjoying itself every morning by a dip in the river, detailing the place and making it plain enough for anyone to recognize. This letter was published in the English newspapers and at once sent to Germany by spies. The Germans, knowing the name of the town and at what part of the river the bathers were to be found, shelled the spot and killed many of them. They also shelled the quarter of the town where the regiment was quartered and they killed many more—all because a seemingly innocent letter was allowed to be published.

Again on an extended fighting line such as that which is common in the present war, the separate units seldom know what is going on elsewhere, and if details are allowed to get out they often furnish most valuable information to the enemy. Germany is ready to take advantage of every point, no matter how small.

The British public is said to be beginning to realize all this and to be becoming more reconciled to the censorship as it realizes that this is really a life-and-death struggle for the nation and that it must submit to small inconveniences rather than create great trouble for the hard-working commanders in the field.
